

A new "How it Is" DVD/ booklet with tips for young mums and dads parenting together is now available. It's a big challenge to work together to nurture the development of young babies and toddlers as the birth of a baby often comes as a huge shock to the system. Having a little one totally dependent on you adds plenty of stress to your relationship with your partner and it's critical we learn how to work together to create a warm and safe environment for our children. Research has shown that babies and toddlers do much better when they do not have to live with a lot of stress in the early years. This new resource is designed to help reduce that stress factor in family relationships so that children can get a better start in life.
